The audience was had a lot of energy! They laughed often and had great reactions. They applauded at the top of the show and intermission. They were also a bit chatty. I was told there was a child talking a lot as well. There were many cheers at curtain call and a lot of love for Renfield. A whistling sound could be heard at some points; Chris pointed out that is sounded like someone in the audience had a hearing aid. At the top of Act 2, a light in the hall/entryway was left on. Tai turned it off. The blood when Renfield cuts Seward perfectly sprayed and covered Renfield! The coffin was just a little off spike at the end; it was angled a little too upstage.

Sound	1. During sound check, everything sounded much quieter than usual. All speakers were working. Rhett helped Tai double check everything. The computer volume was up; eventually they adjusted the volume to the level that seemed correct. We're still not sure why everything sounded quieter, but the cast told me everything sounded normal during the performance. 2. SQ 35.2 was just a beat late. 3. Kim opened that window in a slightly different spot tonight so we took that howls/waves crashing cues out of order to match it.
Music	1. No notes to report, thank you.
Stage Management	1. Take a look at the timing of the windows closing cue/make sure it closes before Kim gets there.
